Verbal Description

Fragment of a metate from near a leg -- there is a slight swelling indicating the leg placement. The piece is triangular, with 2 approximately 10 cm sides and one 11 cm side. The underside is pecked on very lightly ground, while the upper side is flat and ground, though not very glossy. The edges are not rounded, except for one edge on the upper surface and one point. These are rounded, and the point looks battered, suggesting that the piece was used as a pounder after ~~the~~ the original metate broke. Made of vesicular basalt.
